China's steel plate export prices supported by domestic prices

By Alice Li - Tuesday 07 November

China's steel plate export prices increased in the week ended Tuesday November 7 amid the increased domestic steel prices, sources told Fastmarkets.

Some buyers opted to remain hesitant amid the higher prices for steel plate exports, sources said.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment for steel heavy plate, export, fob China main port was $540-560 per tonne on Tuesday, up by $5 per tonne in the mid-price from the previous week.

Some major Chinese steel mills slightly raised offer prices for December-loaded export medium steel plate in the week to Tuesday, but some others kept basic offers unchanged, though left limited room for price negotiations, some market participants said.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment for steel plate domestic, ex-whs Eastern China was 3,840-3,980 yuan ($528-547) per tonne on Friday November 3, up by 40-60 yuan from the previous week.

Domestic steel prices in China in recent weeks were mainly supported by positive sentiment on the expectation of further stimulus measures by the country's central government to boost economic recovery, sources said.

Decreased domestic coke prices also eased some production costs, allowing mills to maintain production rates, sources told Fastmarkets.

"The market sentiment still remains optimistic toward the previous news of the issuance of 1 trillion yuan in special treasury bonds in late October," a Shanghai-based trader said.

The Shanghai Futures Exchange's most-traded January contract for hot-rolled coil, a major downstream flat steel product, increased by 1.06% to 3,899 yuan ($536) per tonne on Friday, also finding support from the announced stimulus measures, sources said.

A seller based in the Middle East kept their offer price for medium plate unchanged at $550 per tonne, FOB China, on Tuesday and indicated a bit of room for price negotiations.

In Hebei province, a mill in Handan city increased its offer for medium plate by $20 per tonne to $560 per tonne FOB China. Another local mill offered at $555 per tonne FOB China for the same material.

An offer for some high-quality medium plate from south China also increased by $10 per tonne to $600 per tonne FOB China, a mill source in south China told Fastmarkets.

Meanwhile, the offer prices from a private mill in Jiangsu province for medium plates stayed firm at $540-550 per tonne FOB China on Tuesday.

The traded level for prompt-shipped medium plate was higher than that of December-loaded cargoes, at $565 per tonne FOB China this week, a Shanghai-based trader said.

Overall trading activities from buyers in Southeast Asia was still focused on low-priced medium plate from China, and buyers were cautious in buying after major Chinese sellers increased the offer levels, a Zhejiang-based trader said.

A few traders were heard to leave their offer prices unchanged and were unwilling to go lower due to the limited reselling margins, a trader source in south China said.

Some sources, however, indicated that export prices for medium plate might remain in flux in the short term due to domestic price movements.

"We need to see if oversea buyers also follow the uptrend in offer prices we've seen recently," a Hangzhou-based trader said.

industry analyst told Fastmarkets.

The higher rebar supply put downward pressure on rebar prices, a trader in Shanghai said.

The value decrease of the January rebar futures contract on the Shanghai Futures Exchange further weighed on spot rebar prices, sources said.

A second trader in Shanghai said most of his customers were quiet on Tuesday, with only a few buyers purchasing rebar, and only in small tonnages.

Market Chatter

“Trading houses started building rebar inventories when prices dropped to around 3,550 yuan per tonne in winter of last year. They plan to wait for prices to decrease [again] before starting [to stock rebar in winter for the sales in spring],” the first Shanghai-based trader said.

Billet

Fastmarkets' daily price assessment for steel billet domestic, exw Tangshan, Northern China was 3,550 yuan per tonne including value-added tax on Tuesday, the same as Monday.

Shanghai Futures Exchange

The most-traded January rebar futures contract closed at 3,791 yuan per tonne on Tuesday, down by 14 yuan per tonne from 3,805 yuan per tonne on Monday.
