US domestic plate prices flat in quiet market

By Melissa VanDervort - Tuesday 08 April

Domestic plate prices in the US were steady in the week to Tuesday April 8, with sources reporting average demand in a tepid domestic market still weighing the effect of continued tariff discussions between the US, Canada and Mexico.

Fastmarkets' weekly assessment for steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $57 per hundredweight ($1,140 per short ton) on Tuesday, flat from April 1 and down by 5% from $60 per cwt on March 25.

Inputs were collected in a range from $54-60 per cwt, representing offers and assessments of the general spot market.

Demand for domestic plate is steady, and the market remains quiet, sources told Fastmarkets.

A distributor source said that most buyers on the spot market are keeping orders to a minimum in the near term, preferring to stay on the sidelines while assessing the market effect of ongoing tariff negotiations between the North American countries.

"[We are] keeping purchases to a minimum, as activity [in the plate market] has definitely slowed," the distributor said. "Demand has slowed. [There is] still some business out there, but not anywhere like it was before."

"Demand is still flat to down slightly from our side," a second distributor said. "These tariffs have disrupted business as well."

A third distributor said they expect tariff discussions to bolster domestic demand.

"[Plate] customers are definitely busier, and the US [plate] mills are busier due to the lack of imports," the third distributor said.

Lead times are at four to five weeks, sources said.

Steel billet news

Russian billet prices slide amid weakening ruble, lower Asian prices

By Vlada Novokreshchenova - Tuesday 08 April

Russian steel billet exporters reduced their asking prices by Tuesday April 8, following the weakening of the local currency versus the US dollar, as well as pressure from lower prices from Asian competitors.

Fresh steel billet offers from Russia varied within the range of $445-450 per tonne FOB Black Sea, and even as low as $440 per tonne FOB in some cases, sources told Fastmarkets. This is versus $453-460 per tonne FOB Black Sea heard at the end of last week.

On Tuesday, $1 was worth 85.8 rubles, compared with 83 rubles to $1 on Friday April 4, according to Fastmarkets' currency conversion calculations.

Lower prices from Asian suppliers was another factor that pushed Russian billet offers down. According to a number of sources, fresh asking prices from China and Indonesia to Turkey, which is also a key outlet for Russian mills, came within the range of $465-470 per tonne CFR early this week versus $480 per tonne CFR and above before the Eid al Fitr holidays, which marked the end of the holy month of Ramadan at the end of March.

But buyers have taken a wait-and-see stance amid the uncertainty in the global market, caused by the the introduction of reciprocal tariffs by the US earlier in April.

"There's a lot of panic at stock exchanges and around currencies rates. Many [market participants] are at a standstill," a Russian production source said.

A Russian trading source said that the maximum bids from Turkey are coming at the price equivalent to $437 per tonne FOB Black Sea.

At the same time, a Turkish trading source estimated workable prices to vary within the range of $450-455 per tonne CFR, which would net back to $430-435 per tonne FOB Black Sea.

A CIS-based producer source, however, noted that Turkish authorities increased gas and electricity prices several days earlier, which — according to his opinion — should result in an increase of around $10 per tonne, but no effect has been reported so far.

Another Turkish market source said that local producer Kardemir is expected to announce new prices this week.

Fastmarkets calculated its twice-weekly steel billet index export, fob Black Sea, CIS at $446 per tonne on Tuesday, down by $2 per tonne from $448 per tonne on Friday.
