US domestic plate market remains stagnant for end of 2024; major uptick expected in January as Trump takes office: sources

By Melissa VanDervort - Tuesday 10 December

Domestic plate demand is poised to turn a corner in January 2025 with the inauguration of President-elect Donald Trump, sources said.

Some market participants welcome the change — and have said it’s been overdue for the entirety of President Joe Biden’s administration.

Fastmarkets’ weekly assessment for steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $43 per hundredweight ($860 per short ton) on December 10, up 2.38% from $42 per cwt on December 3.

Inputs were collected in a range from $42-44 per cwt, representing offers and deals.

Plate sources reported continued soft demand in the domestic market.

Some market participants said that will change drastically by January 2025, when Trump is inaugurated into office.

“The gravy train on Easy Street is coming to a rapid halt [in the plate market],” a Midwest distributor said. “The [Biden] administration talked and talked [for four years] — and did nothing. While we can speculate on the changes coming [in the plate market], we don’t know [what will happen] — but I can assure you that it will happen quick.”

The distributor said that the recent SSAB price increase, initially announced on October 24, has put upward pressure on the domestic market, but the spot market has yet to fully absorb the increase.

“While it was apparent [throughout Biden’s administration] that Biden wasn’t fit to run and Trump was the golden child, those of us [in the domestic plate market] who were thinking ahead to be successful made plans for the change of business environment.”

“[For] now, it’s frowned upon for a [steel industry] business to make money [in the US] — certainly a change of thinking [with the imminent inauguration of president-elect Trump],” the distributor said. “It seems we may be rewarded for [our] hard work and success.”

“It’s that thinking that make America a success and a world power, and we are pivoting toward ‘Making America Great Again,’” the distributor said.

Lead times remain firm at three to four weeks.
