Steel plate news

Domestic plate price static following US presidential election

By Melissa VanDervort - Tuesday 12 November

Plate market participants expressed relief at the conclusion to the tumultuous US presidential election on November 5, but sources maintained that the domestic plate market should remain in limbo for the remainder of 2024, with improving demand expected in the first quarter of 2025.

Fastmarkets' weekly assessment for steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $43 per hundredweight ($860 per short ton) on Tuesday November 12, flat week on week but down by 2.27% from $44 per cwt on October 22.

Inputs were collected in a range of $41-44 per cwt, representing deals, offers and assessments.

Plate market participants breathed a collective sigh of relief in the wake of the US presidential election on November 5.

Although most sources in the plate market approved of the election outcome, market participants expected plate prices to remain in a holding pattern, weighed down by long-standing soft demand, an overabundance of supply and weak trading on the spot market.

Most sources did not anticipate any significant uptick in the domestic plate market before the end of 2024, with some not expecting any improvement until late in the first quarter of 2025.

"Nothing has changed on the plate side," a Midwestern distributor said. "[It will be] quiet until the end of the year and maybe [even] through the first quarter of 2025."

Although the election is over, market uncertainty remains, due in part to widespread economic and political worry that gripped the US during the last half of 2024.

Sources expected that uncertainty to gradually improve, along with an economic turn-around, once President-elect Donald Trump officially takes office in January 2025.

"It also seems like people are happy to see progress being made immediately, even before the [presidential] inauguration," a second distributor said. "It seems like qualified people are being chosen [for the incoming Trump administration], so maybe improvement [is] being made."

"Optimism is much needed right now. I feel like [America] will become more business-friendly [under a Trump administration] – we [market participants] will all benefit," the distributor added.

Lead times remained unchanged at three to four weeks.
