For example, the re-election of Donald Trump will bring protectionism back to the spotlight, sources said.

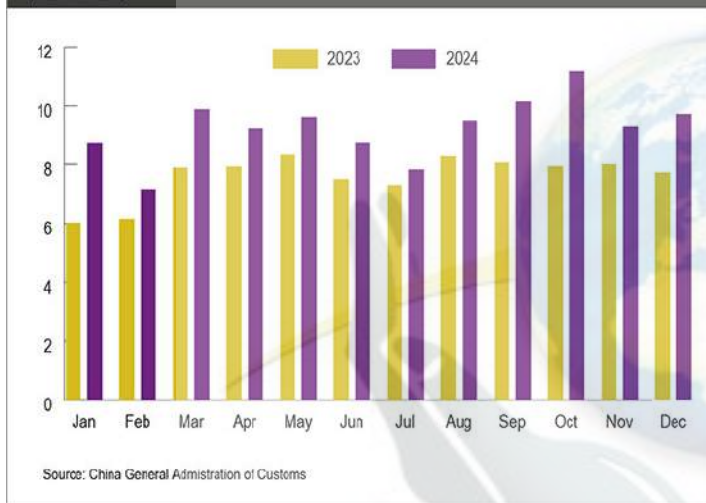

In addition to the impending inauguration of United States president-elect Donald Trump, ongoing anti-dumping probes into Chinese steel products by South Korea, Vietnam and Thailand have also caused market concerns. Additionally, Malaysia has imposed provisional anti-dumping duties on some flat-rolled products of iron or non-alloy steel exports from China on January 11 2025.

Some Chinese exporters turned their target markets to other regions, namely the Middle East or South America due to their expectations of potential demand in these regions.

Steel plate news

US domestic plate market flat in second week of January; sources expect prices to rise by Q2 '25

By Melissa VanDervort - Tuesday 14 January

Domestic plate prices in the US were firm on Tuesday January 14, with market participants anticipating an upswing in demand and an upward price trajectory between the mid-first quarter and second quarter of the year.

Fastmarkets' weekly assessment for steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $42 per hundredweight ($840 per short ton) on January 14, flat since December 17, 2024.

Inputs were collected at $42 per cwt, representing deals and assessments of the general market.

The plate market remains in limbo in the second week of January, with sources reporting slow to average demand with many market participants on the sidelines.

"Everyone [in the general wider steel markets] has raised their prices [recently], so plate may be next — but not yet," a distributor said.

A second distributor said that plate demand for the infrastructure and general construction markets is strengthening, and expected to rise further in the first and second quarter of the new year.

"We keep hearing from the plate mills that action is picking up on the infrastructure side, [but] we are not seeing that on the service center side [of the plate market] as of yet," the second distributor said.

Lead times stand at two to three weeks, sources said.

Steel wire rod news

Nucor increases wire rod transaction prices by $30 per ton

By Robert England - Tuesday 14 January

Nucor notified customers on Monday January 13 that it is increasing steel wire rod transaction prices by $30 per short ton.

"Existing confirmed orders will be price protected if shipped by January 31, 2025," the notice stated.

The steelmaker also reminded customers that wire rod diameters below ¼ inch remain subject to a size extra charge of $20 per ton.

A distributor said the market was surprised about the timing of the price increase given current subdued demand.

"We're all waiting to see if business increases, [but] I will say it has been busier and customers are more optimistic going forward," the distributor said.

"The market was expecting some movement based on higher December scrap prices, but not a $30 increase on a $20 scrap move," a second distributor said. "That said, I doubt that many are surprised that Nucor and the others would go up this much."

"And yes, I think it will be mostly accepted, and the other mills will follow, publicly or in negotiations. The Liberty outage is keeping markets fairly tight, even in this slowest season of the year," the second distributor added.

A week earlier on January 7, Nucor notified customers it had ceased production at its wire rod rolling mill in Wallingford, Connecticut, "after thorough analysis" of market conditions.

Fastmarkets' monthly price assessment for steel wire rod (low carbon) industrial quality, fob mill US was $44-49 per hundredweight ($880-980 per short ton) on December 17, up by 2.20% from $43-48 per cwt on November 19.

Fastmarkets will next assess wire rod prices on January 21.
