China's NPI prices rise on stronger nickel futures performances, higher stainless steel prices

By Laura Li - Monday 15 April

Higher nickel futures prices and rising downstream stainless steel prices pushed up those for domestic nickel pig iron (NPI) in China in the week to Friday April 12, sources told Fastmarkets.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment for nickel pig iron, high-grade NPI content 10-15%, spot, ddp China was 935-945 yuan ($129-131) per nickel unit on Friday, up by 5-10 yuan per nickel unit compared with 925-940 yuan per nickel unit in the previous assessment.

In the spot market, a bid was heard at 935-940 yuan per nickel unit, while a separate deal was heard at 940 yuan per nickel unit. Deals heard ranged from 940-955 yuan per nickel unit.

A stronger performance of nickel on the Shanghai Futures Exchange (SHFE) and the London Metal Exchange (LME) in the week to Friday, coupled with higher stainless steel prices on the SHFE, led to a pick-up in market sentiment and drove the upward trend in NPI prices, sources told Fastmarkets.

"The uptick [in NPI prices] is mainly due to the recent rise in nickel and stainless steel futures prices," a Shanghai-based NPI trader said. "This is more a result of macro-factor stimulus rather than supply and demand driven."

Stainless steel spot prices also rose over the recent week, lending support to the upstream NPI market, sources said. But the uptrend was capped due to persistently slow destocking of stainless steel.

"Though steel mills are maintaining high productivity, we currently see no signs of accelerated destocking and demand recovery in the stainless steel sector," a nickel ore trader based in Shanghai said. "So stainless steel mills are still very cautious on sourcing feedstock. When traders offer 950 yuan [per nickel unit for NPI] or even more, they think the price is too high."

Fastmarkets' price assessment for stainless steel cold-rolled coil 2 mm grade 304 domestic, ex-whs China was 13,600-13,650 yuan per tonne on Wednesday April 10, up by 350 yuan per tonne from 13,250-13,300 yuan per tonne one week earlier.

Some market participants expressed concern regarding the sustainability of the upswing in NPI prices, Fastmarkets heard.

"Personally, I am skeptical about a sustained price rebound," an NPI trader based in eastern China said. "Other than focusing on whether downstream demand is likely to strengthen in the future, we must also consider the overall fundamentals of oversupply in the NPI market."

Despite the increase in NPI prices, the upstream nickel ore market, however, saw a slow downtrend in prices due to increased supply, but continued sluggish buying appetite from China's NPI producers, sources said.

"The rainy season in the Philippines is nearing its end, and I heard that the amount of nickel ore coming from the Philippines has increased in the recent week," a nickel ore trader based in eastern China said.

The trader added, "But we still don't see an improving demand from the domestic NPI plants because many of them are facing production cuts and suspensions, which has led to a slight decline in nickel ore prices."

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment of laterite ore with 1.3% Ni content, cif China was $28-30 per tonne on Friday, the first assessment of the price.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment of laterite ore with 1.5% Ni content, cif China was $44-46 per tonne on Friday, down by 2 yuan per tonne compared with the prior assessment.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment of nickel ore 1.8% basis 15-20% Fe water content: 30-35% Si:Mg ratio<2 lot size 50,000 tonnes, cif China was $76-78 per tonne on April 12, also down by 2 yuan per tonne from $78-80 per tonne on April 5.
