"Investors are likely booking profits and cutting their positions [in SHFE steel prices] ahead of [the 3-day national holiday from June 22 to 24 to celebrate the Dragon Boat Festival], after previous gains in the prices. SHFE steel prices are expected to remain rangebound in the short term," an industry analyst in eastern China said.

Offers appear in Russia's export HRC market, but demand muted

By Marina Shulga - Tuesday 20 June

Export offers of Russia-origin hot-rolled coil appeared in the market, although demand remained slow during the week to Monday June 19.

Fastmarkets' price assessment for steel hot-rolled coil export, fob Black Sea, CIS was $565-585 per tonne on Monday, down by $5 per tonne from $570-590 per tonne a week before.

Offers from one HRC exporter, impacted by sanctions, appeared at $580-585 per tonne FOB. That would be close to $610 per tonne CFR in Turkey.

The acceptable level for buyers was not heard at higher than $590 per tonne CFR, or about $560-565 per tonne FOB.

"Russia-origin material is not preferable, because people are cautious about issues with banks [due to sanctions] and they worry that the money won't be transferred to the bank accounts," one trader source said. "Also, demand for imported HRC is slow in Turkey, because the export market is not good, and local supply is likely to increase."

Offers from other Russian suppliers impacted by the sanctions were heard in Egypt at $630 per tonne CFR with August shipment, which would be equivalent to about $590 per tonne FOB if shipped from the Black Sea. Although, there were "no takers mainly because of the sanctions," a trader source from Egypt said.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment for steel cold-rolled coil export, fob Black Sea, CIS was $655-690 per tonne on Monday, down by $5 per tonne from $660-695 a week earlier, in line with the overall HRC market.

Russian domestic steel market quiet despite concerns about oversupply

By Sofia Okun - Tuesday 20 June

Russian domestic prices for reinforcement bar (rebar) and flat steel products remained stable on Monday June 19, despite market participant concerns about the potential for oversupply.

Fastmarkets' price assessment for steel plate domestic, cpt Moscow, Russia was 79,000-80,000 rubles ($940-952) per tonne including VAT on Monday June 19, unchanged from June 12.

"For now, the prices are unchanged, but if you bid, you are likely to get lower prices," the first trader said. "Either there's overcapacity or a decrease in demand."

A second trader said offers for steel plate were below the low end of the Fastmarkets' range, but that could not be corroborated by other market participants.

Prices for cold- and hot-rolled sheet steel, meanwhile, also remained unchanged week on week on Monday - although some market participants also suggested there had been a shift in supply dynamics.

"The hot rolled sheet [market] is over-saturated: the secondary market was at 77,000 [rubles, or $917 per tonne], last month but is now at 70,000 [rubles, or $833, per tonne]," a third trader said.

The secondary market participant referred to volumes below 500-3,000 tonnes being reflected in Fastmarkets' price assessment.

Fastmarkets' price assessment for steel hot-rolled sheet domestic, cpt Moscow, Russia was 64,000-66,000 rubles per tonne including VAT on June 19, unchanged from the week before.

Fastmarkets' price assessment for steel cold-rolled sheet domestic, cpt Moscow, Russia remained stable on Monday at 73,500 rubles per tonne including VAT, unchanged since March 13.

Russian suppliers have been focusing on selling into their domestic market, due to having limited export options since international sanctions were introduced in response to Russia's invasion of Ukraine.

Fastmarkets' price assessment for steel reinforcing bar (rebar) domestic, cpt Moscow, Russia was 52,500-53,500 rubles ($626-638) per tonne, including 20% value-added tax (VAT), on Monday, unchanged week on week.

"No new prices [from producers] yet, but some producers are considering an increase," a trader told Fastmarkets.

"I heard from one producer about the possibility of a 'small increase' next month, of 2,000 rubles, but to me, 2,000 rubles is not a 'small increase,'" the trader added.

Improving rebar price boosts buying interest for imported steel scrap in Taiwan

By Tianran Zhao - Tuesday 20 June

Spot prices for containerized steel scrap imported into Taiwan continued to trend upward on Tuesday June 20 amid improving rebar prices in the local market.

A major Taiwanese electric-arc furnace (EAF) steelmaker announced on Monday that it will increase its selling price for rebar by NT$300 ($9.74) per tonne for the week.

The steelmaker also increased its purchase price for local heavy melting scrap (HMS) 1&2 by NT$200 per tonne.
