Steel plate news

US domestic plate prices unchanged in sluggish market

By Melissa VanDervort - Wednesday 26 June

Domestic steel plate prices in the US stayed flat on Tuesday June 25, with market participants reporting continuously muted demand and slow buying in what has been a lackluster summer construction season.

Fastmarkets' weekly assessment of steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $52 per hundredweight ($1,040 per short ton) on Tuesday June 25, unchanged from June 18 and down by 3.70% from $54 per cwt on June 11.

Inputs were collected in a range of $51-53 per cwt, representing deals and assessments.

The domestic plate market is spotty, with sources reporting limited buying and continued sluggish demand at domestic mills during the summer construction season, which is typically a busy time of year for the plate market.

"Demand is just okay," a market buyer said. "In our business, we normally see upticks in demand during the construction season. This year is just okay."

Market participants anticipated that the domestic price would continue to fall incrementally during summer amid dwindling demand, with some sources expecting that market activity will not rebound until after the US presidential election in November.

"Plate [market activity] remains spotty, and we expect more of the same rolling into July," a market distributor said. "We don't see any real activity happening until the end of the year or beginning of next year, once the election ends."

Sources expected Nucor to officially announce a plate price reduction in the steelmaker's monthly price letter at the end of June, and sources anticipated that other major domestic mills would follow suit and reduce prices in the near term.

"It would not surprise me if Nucor came out with a large [plate price] decrease, as their current price sheet is extremely irrelevant to the market," a second distributor said. "[There is] plenty of supply, and demand is vanilla ice cream at best. Plate is a mess."

Lead times were reported around three to five weeks.
