Quote of the day

"With contract season upon us we should expect to see something from the mills other than just outages to try to perk things up a bit," a distributor said, "but I don't know what it's going to be, demand is still stable at best."

Steel plate news

US domestic plate prices unchanged in muted market

By Melissa VanDervort - Tuesday 07 October

Plate prices in the US were stable on Tuesday October 7, with sources reporting continued soft demand and minimal spot activity in a mostly stagnant domestic market.

Fastmarkets' weekly assessment for steel cut-to-length plate carbon grade, fob mill US was $50 per hundredweight ($1,000 per short ton) on Tuesday, steady since going down by 1.96% from $51 per cwt on September 2.

Inputs were collected in a range from $47.50-53.00 per cwt, representing offers and general assessments of the spot market.

Plate demand remains lackluster, sources told Fastmarkets, as sluggish spot trading continues to dampen the domestic market.

Sources were doubtful that recent mill price increases of $60 per short ton by Nucor and SSAB Americas will be fully accepted by the market, citing persistently weak demand.

"Business isn't too bad, but it's not 'increase-prices' good, either," a distributor said. "The [price increase customer] letters were just a ploy to put a floor under the current price."

A second distributor shared a similar view, saying, "I guess [the mills] will try and see what happens on the [price] increases. We don't see it sticking, simply because demand is not good from our side."

"[The] mills are trying to dig in. Personally, I think it will be a challenge unless demand really kicks off, [because] it's been pretty rough as of late," a third distributor said. "Mills [are] trying to draw that line in the sand and stop the bleeding [of plate prices declining]. I welcome it, but [I'm] not so sure it will stick and [I'm] not sure many [buyers] will rush to place orders at higher numbers to have higher prices and unsold steel on the floor."

Lead times were reported at four to six weeks.

Billet imports

Steel billet import prices remained stable in the first week of October. Market participants didn't hear any new offers or deals made to the UAE.

A bid for billet imports to the country was reported at $465 per tonne CFR, but no deals were confirmed, an international trade source told Fastmarkets.

Market participants linked the slow activity to the Chinese public holiday, observed on October 1-8.

Fastmarkets' weekly price assessment for steel billet import, cfr Jebel Ali, UAE was $465-500 per tonne on October 7, unchanged since September 9.
